

Peace, Justice and Sustainability: Strengthening the Links

57th Annual Fellowship of Reconciliation
Northwest Regional Conference at Seabeck

Thursday - Sunday July 2 - 5, 2015
at Seabeck Conference Center, Washington State

Everybody concerned about saving our planet and creating a more just and less violent human community is welcome to this family friendly conference. Together we will ask how the issues we care about are connected to one another and how we can best work with one another and with all the many others committed to bettering our world. Programs for children and youth will help these attendees form peer communities, although all attendees are invited to participate in workshops and talks.

We will be inspired and informed by keynote speakers Jacqueline Patterson, Director of the NAACP Environmental and Climate Justice Program, and the Rev. Osagyefo Uhuru Sekou, a national FOR fellow leading our participation in the Black Lives Matter movement. They and our workshop facilitators bring a wealth of experience in linking the issues and linking the activists. Come learn, come teach, come enjoy the fellowship and the fun as well as the work!

*Our conference draws people from British Columbia, Washington, and Oregon, as well as others who travel from other regions. Located on the Hood Canal, the conference center offers views of mountains and water, grounds with lawns and forest, comfortable housing, and family style dining. We enjoy one another's company and have opportunities for swimming, row boating, and nature walks. There are plenty of opportunities for informal discussion as well as the planned activities. Please join us!

Fellowship of Reconciliation is a hundred-year-old international organization, founded in Europe in 1914, and in the U.S. in 1915. FOR has opposed all wars since World War I and worked for a just and equitable society using nonviolent means. This year's Seabeck conference is planned by Western Washington FOR.
